1. According to an employee of the Rumanian State Railroads, one or two cars carrying artillery or soldiers is attached to "almost all" trains moving from northern Rumania to the south.
2. A physician residing in Floesti and making daily trips between that city and Bucharest states that Rumanian troops and artillery are being moved southward from an unknown area north of Floesti. Another individual living near the Floesti freight station reports the "uninterrupted" movement of trucks, tanks and troops, generally in a southerly direction.
3. The fiancée of a field grade officer of the Rumanian Army has informed friends that the officer has been given a number, by which he is now known; his name is no longer used in official business.*
